

Notes on Contributors

Gisleide Abreu presently works as the Coordinator for the Management and Integration of Social Information for the Municipal Government of the city of Campinas, Brazil. She oversees the administration and implementation of all Income Transfer Programs in the including Bolsa Familia, the largest Conditional Cash Transfer Program implemented in the country. She has also worked as technical advisor for the administration of income generation programs and other social programs developed in the region. She holds a bachelor's degree in Psychology from the Universidade São Judas Tadeu, São Paulo. She has also attended many professional development workshops including the Seminar for Administrators of Work and Income Generation Policies at the State University of Campinas, Brazil. Ms. Abreu has presented in various national and international conferences, including the National Seminar for Income Transfer Programs (2005), First Latin American Congress in Psychology (2005) and in the Regional Meeting of the Brazilian Social Psychology Association-ABRAPSO (2004). Email: gisleide.abreu@campinas.sp.gov.br

Dan Bar-On is a Professor of Psychology at the Department of Behavioral Sciences at Ben-Gurion University. He is also the co-director of PRIME (Peace Research Institute in the Middle East) near Beit Jala in the West Bank. He is the author of several books, among others - Legacy of Silence: Encounters with Children of the Third Reich (Harvard University Press, 1989), Fear and Hope: Three Generations of Holocaust Survivors' Families (Harvard University Press, 1998) and The Indescribable and the Undiscussable (Central European University Press, 1999). In 1996 he was awarded the David Lopatie Chair for Post-Holocaust Psychological Studies. In 2001 he received the Bundesverdienst Kreuz First Class, from German President Dr. Johannes Rau. In 2003 he received the Eric Maria Remarque Peace Prize in Osnabruck, Germany. In 2005 they received the Victor J. Goldberg IIE Prize for Peace in the Middle East and the EAEA 3rd Out-of-Europe Grundtvig Award on Active citizenship in a democratic society. Email: danbaron@bgu.ac.il

Michael Brophy has been Executive Director of AET since 1993 where his work has focused mainly on non-formal education in Somalia and Southern Sudan. He previously worked as an education adviser with the UK Overseas Development Administration (now DFID), The British Council and UNESCO in a number of countries including Guyana, Seychelles, The Gambia, Bhutan and Jordan. He has a PhD in the evaluation of distance education. Email: m.brophy@africaeducationaltrust.org

Donald Bundy is the Lead Specialist on school health and nutrition and HIV&AIDS at the World Bank and currently provides technical and operational support to SHN and HIV&AIDS programmes globally. Previously a Professor of Epidemiology at the University of Oxford, he is author of Education and HIV/AIDS: A Window of Hope and more than 300 other school health and nutrition related publications. He was a co-founder of the FRESH partnership and now also heads the UNAIDS Inter-Agency Task Team on Education's Working Group to Accelerate the Education Sector Response to HIV&AIDS.

Email:dbundy@worldbank.org

Nancy Campbell graduated from Wake Forest University in 2003 with a Bachelor of Arts in France. She will complete a Master of Arts in International Education from The George Washington University in the summer of 2007 where her studies focused on international exchange and higher education. She is currently working at the George Washington University School of Medicine and Health Sciences in the Office of Student Opportunities.

Ed Cooper is a pediatrician, a London graduate, based in London. He got his core pediatric training in Washington DC, lived for 20 years in the Caribbean, and now makes short but frequent visits to Africa. As a consultant to the Partnership for Child Development he has assisted in Inter-Agency Task Team workshops on Accelerating the Education Sector's Response to HIV and AIDS. He also visits South Africa as a clinical mentor in the roll-out of anti-viral treatment for HIV infected children. As a medical scientist his interests have been in nutrition, parasitology and HIV, but he is a generalist with wider interests in international development, education and the use of language.

Email:edcooper@doctors.org.uk

Fatuma N. Chege is Senior Lecturer and Chair of the Department of Educational Foundations, Kenyatta University, Nairobi - Kenya, where she teaches sociology of education and philosophy of education. She is also Chair of Kenya Education Staff Institute –KESI, and co-founder of Women Educational Researchers of Kenya. She has a doctorate degree from University of Cambridge, UK. Her main research focus is on gender, sexuality, HIV/AIDS, life skills education and impacts of education on poverty. Currently Fatuma leads the Kenya team in the North-South RECOUP (Research Consortium on Educational Outcomes and Poverty) Project. She is a contributing author to the UN Secretary General's World Report on Violence against Children (UN, 2006). Other recent publications include: Girls' and Women's Education in Kenya: Gender Perspectives and Trends (with D. Sifuna; UNESCO, 2006,); 'He Put His Hands between Girls' Thighs...' (In Leach & Mitchell, Combating Gender Violence in and around Schools, Trentham Books, 2006); 'Teachers' Gendered Identities, Pedagogy and HIV/AIDS Education in African Settings' (in Journal of Education, South Africa, ISSN 0259-479X No. 38, 2006).

E-mail: fatumasee@wananchi.com

Kensuke Chikamori received his doctorate in Medical Science from University of Tokushima in 1985. He worked for Mpumalanga Secondary Science Initiative (MSSI) since 2001 to 2006. From 2006, he joined a team supporting Strengthening Teacher Education

Project (STEP) in Afghanistan. He is Professor at Naruto University of Education (Department of Basic Human Science for Integrated Studies), Japan. E-mail: chika@naruto-u.ac.jp

Lesley Drake is the Coordinator of the Partnership for Child Development (PCD), based at the Department of Infectious Disease Epidemiology, Imperial College School of Medicine, London. The Partnership for Child Development, created in 1992, is an organisation that works with countries, civil society and international aid agencies to turn the findings of evidence-based research into national, large scale school health and nutrition (SHN) programmes. She has a PhD in infectious disease epidemiology and for the past decade, has led teams providing technical support to the design, implementation and evaluation of SHN and HIV&AIDS programmes to governments of low income countries. See <http://www.schoolsandhealth.org/>. Email: lesley.drake@imperial.ac.uk

Emmanuel Y. Jimenez is Director for the East Asia and the Pacific Region, Human Development, The World Bank and lead author of the World Development Report 2007: Development and the Next Generation. From the Philippines, Dr. Jimenez has held a variety of positions as an economist and manager in the policy, research and operational units of the World Bank. Since early 2002, he has been Sector Director, Human Development, in the World Bank's East Asia Region, where he is responsible for managing operational staff working on education and health issues. Prior to this position, he held a similar position in the Bank's South Asia Region. Before that he served for many years in the Bank's Development Economics Staff, where he managed staff and also engaged in research on a variety of topics, including education and health finance, the private provision of social services, the economics of transfer programs and urban development. He has served both formally and informally on several teams preparing World Development Reports. Before joining the World Bank, Mr. Jimenez was on the faculty of the economics department at the University of Western Ontario in London, Canada. Email: ejimenez2@worldbank.org

Masakazu Kita obtained a Ph D in Chemistry from Osaka University in 1985. He participated in Mpumalanga Secondary Science Initiative, an education development project in South Africa (1999-2006). Since 2006, he has been involved in Strengthening Teacher Education Project in Afghanistan. Currently he is a professor at Faculty of Education, Okayama University, Japan. Email: kitam@cc.okayama-u.ac.jp

Natsuko Kiso is a Consultant with the Development Economics Vice Presidency at The World Bank. She earned her doctorate in economics at Brown University, after completing her M.A. at Brown University and Hitotsubashi University in Tokyo, Japan. Her area of expertise is theoretical and empirical economic analysis on issues such as micro-finance, gender inequality, and impact assessment. Email: nkiso@worldbank.org

Tal Litvak-Hirsch received her Ph.D. in Social Psychology from Ben Gurion University of the Negev in Beer Sheva, Israel. Her research foci are: a. the perception of “others” as part of collective Israeli identity. b. the long-term psycho-social impact of the Holocaust on survivors and their families c. Evaluation research. In 2003-4 she was a research fellow at the Truman institute of peace at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem. In 2005 she was a Fulbright scholar at Earlham College. Currently, she is a researcher and lecturer at the department of behavioral science at Ben Gurion University of the Negev. Apart of her academic work she is also a clinical psychologist working mainly with children and adolescents. Email:hirscht@zahav.net.il

Yumiko Ono is professor at Naruto University of Education. She did her graduate work in educational administration at Hiroshima University. Her research interests include teacher professional development, teacher effectiveness and globalization in education. She has worked for education development projects in South Africa (Mpumalanga Secondary Science Initiative) and Afghanistan (Strengthening Teacher Education Program). Email:ono@naruto-u.ac.jp

Rafiq Othman is a doctoral student at the Education department at Ben Gurion University of the Negev. Her academic work focuses on educated Arabic women and their adjustment in their society. She is a lecturer at the Open University in Jerusalem as well as in David Yalin and Achva Colleges. Rafiq is a specialist in special education and works with both teachers and students. She is a Co-author of a book: Michael Gorkin, Rafiq Othman.1996, “Three Mother, three daughters, Palestinian women’s stories”. She is also an author of two children books in Arabic. Email:rafiaz2002@yahoo.com

Emma Page is the Africa Educational Trust East Africa Regional Manager based in Nairobi and is responsible for the Trust’s projects in Somalia, Southern Sudan, Uganda and Kenya. She has previously worked in project development with the British Council in Brussels and as a language teacher in Florence. She has managed a number of non-formal education projects in Somalia including the Radio Literacy and Life Skills programme and the Community Cooperatives Skills Training Programme. Email:e.page@africaeducationaltrust.org

Cristobal Ridao-Cano is an Economist for East Asia and the Pacific region at The World Bank and a team member of the World Development Report 2007. Mr. Ridao-Cano joined the World Bank in 2002 after completing his PhD in Economics from the University of Colorado at Boulder. He has worked on education and social protection issues in Latin America and East Asia. His research focuses on the dynamics of school and work decisions, intra-household bargaining, intergenerational transfers and evaluation of social programs. Email:cridaocano@worldbank.org

Claire Risley is a mathematical modeller working in the Partnership for Child Development

(PCD). She has developed the Ed-SIDA Excel-based mathematical model to estimate and project the effects of HIV/AIDS on education systems. She uses to model to help educational planners in low income countries develop strategies to deal with the effects of HIV/AIDS and for research purposes. She facilitates courses and workshops run by PCD and is currently developing PCD's Monitoring and Evaluation workshop. She have previously been involved in spatial modelling of Gonorrhoea and within-host modelling of Salmonella.

Email:claire.risley@imperial.ac.uk

Analice Schwartz is a doctoral candidate in Education Policy Administration – International Education at The George Washington University in Washington, D.C. Her research and work experience has been focused on mechanisms for access and equity in basic education, mainly Conditional Cash Transfers, teacher training, and decentralization in the context of education reform in Brazil. She has worked as an education consultant for the World Bank and the Organization of American States. She has also worked as an instructor of English as a Second Language. Ms. Schwartz holds a Master of Arts in Education and Human Development with specialization in International Education from The George Washington University; Washington, DC (2002); a Master of Science (M.S.) in General Education Studies from State University of New York at Albany – SUNY – with concentration in Foreign Language Teaching and Teacher Education (1987); and a Bachelor of Arts (B.A.) in Portuguese Teaching and Linguistics from the State University of Campinas-UNICAMP-Brazil (1984). Email:analica@gwu.edu

Marc Sommers is an Associate Research Professor of Humanitarian Studies at the Fletcher School, Tufts University, and a Research Fellow at Boston University's African Studies Center. His work has taken him to twenty war-affected countries over the past eighteen years. He has consulted for numerous donor, UN, and nongovernmental agencies, and has received research support from the Ford, Guggenheim, Mellon and Rotary foundations. He is currently researching youth issues in Rwanda, and terror warfare, child soldiering, and popular culture in Sierra Leone. His record of publications on youth, education and other war and post-war issues is extensive, and includes Fear in Bongoland: Burundi Refugees in Urban Tanzania, for which he received the 2003 Margaret Mead Award.

Email:Marc.Sommers@tufts.edu

James H. Williams is Associate Professor of International Education & International Affairs. He directs International Education Studies at The George Washington University as well as the Advanced Studies Program for Visiting Scholars at the Graduate School of Education & Human Development. Jim received his doctorate in International Education from Harvard University, along with a Masters of Education in Administration, Planning, and Social Policy. He has taught research methods at Ohio University, where he served as Director of the Center for Higher Education and International Programs. He has also served as a AAAS Diplomacy Fellow in the Africa Bureau of USAID, editor of The FORUM for Advancing

Basic Education and Literacy at the Harvard Institute for International Development, and faculty member at Obirin University, Tokyo, where he lived for ten years.

Email:jhw@gwu.edu